p team, held the championship title, who was an aspirant for a place on quartet. Touchard extended Williams to the limit of five sets before the latter won, at

The contest was filled with dramatic features, and through its later games it held a big gallery spellbound. Touchard uncovered a twist to his shots into the eft hand corner of Williams's court that the ball over the net. As a consequence Williams piled up 53 outs and 57 nets, to 51 and 35, respectively, for his crafty op-with the tide of battle going against him. Williams made his attack at the was his only hope. By wondersteady playing, in which he wrested the offensive from Touchard by sheer power of his game, the young internasets behind. It was a marvellous display To what extent he played an fact that on the final tally Touchard had won more games and points than the man who defeated him. Touchard's total on games was 26 to 23, and on points 165

Few players this season have shown such an average of winning strokes as He counted 72 winning aces to 118 losing shots, while Touchard had winning aces to 88 losing shots. Both of the players ran afoul of the serle, as administered by P. A. Vaile, the English critic. Vaile had no merc on either of them, and several times Touchard deplayed his temper to the llery, once viciously smashing the ball at Williams in his abandonment to anger as the two came up to the net

Williams earned his victory and richly pon him at the end. Touchard almost tore his backhand to tatters as he kept unding and hammering away at it with the spinning ball. Several times Touchard won games after Williams had led him at and 40-love by using the shot that was out or net from the opposite court.

Williams mastered the strange flight of number of starters. upon his play at the net, making use of mad as a hatter when he could not get the ball squarely on his racquet, and Blackton's Demon Wins An-Vatle's calls of foot faults did not help matters. At the close Williams worked his own service so that he ran out with two love games. So impressed was Willston, the young Californian, who has performed so ably, on Thursday. The point score of the match follows:

Plenty of Wind for Yachts on Ten Thousand Spectators See Some of the Best Racing Ever Held in Orange County.

Has It Nip and Tuck with Com- Makes Half Mile in Fast Time, but Stumbles on Second Lap -Eighteen Heats Required to Decide Three Contests.

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 19.-It took eighteen heats to decide three races at the openfast race in a fresh breeze that was ing of the light harness meeting at the historic track here this afternoon, but the most wonderful part of the whole wind deprived most of the yachts of a thing was that the crowd, ten thousand test of their ability in windward work, strong, stayed to the finish. By 12 o'clock every seat in the huge grandstand ha the reaches and runs, resulting in some been sold, and as the boxes were reserved close and exciting finishes, especially in six months ago the only thing for the Arvia defeated Commedore J.
